Input tax credit

- In order to avoid cascading effect, the taxes paid on input are considered as pre paid taxes and not a part of cost of purchase.
- Since tax does not become a part of cost of purchase, the tax amount doesn't increase the cost further.
- Tax instead will be recorded separately and will be treated as a asset in Balance Sheet.
- Ultimately, the consumer prices have the impact . Thus every non involvement of tax in cost will be a potential reduction in consumer price.
- The tax will flow parallel to the value of goods till the time it reaches ultimate consumer.
- The broad concept of any tax credit system is to charge and collect tax only to the extent of value addition.

Input tax credit under GST

- Input tax credit concept is not really new in Indian Taxation system.
- The concept of Modvat credit had been introduced in the year 1986 and thereafter we had introduction of Cenvat credit Rules.
- In Sales tax ,the concept of Input tax credit was only seen after introduction of VAT.
- Seamless credit is one of the prime objective in GST , thus the concept of ITC is deeply dealt in with
- The credit flow under GST is more open and free as compared to earlier laws.
- Thereby the effective passage of credit can be achieved and will result in substantial savings in cost.
